

Alabaster House Announces 2025 Leadership Summit: Leading in Times of Crisis

WASHINGTON, DC, UNITED STATES, August 4, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Alabaster House equips high-capacity leaders with the tools, insight, and community they need to thrive in uncertain times. As a nonprofit that works closely with elected officials, C-suite executives, and other leaders, Alabaster House annually hosts the Leadership Summit—a transformative gathering that brings together influential voices to prepare leaders to face crises with confidence.

This year's Summit will take place September 10–11, 2025 in Washington, D.C., offering participants a rare opportunity to “see around the corner” of what’s ahead—economically, culturally, and legislatively—and apply that knowledge within their own spheres of influence.

This year, Dr. Alveda King, niece of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., civil rights advocate, and former Georgia state representative, will deliver a keynote address on Leadership Legacy.

Leadership is the key to any organization. The best leaders need fewer words than most because they lead with their lives.”

John Dalton, Former Secretary of the Navy

At its core, the Leadership Summit is about leading into the future with resilience, conviction, and strategic insight—especially in times of crisis. Whether you lead in your community, boardroom, or government office, this experience is designed to level up your leadership.
