What Are The Factors Driving The Aerosol Spray Market?

The projected growth of the aerosol spray market is largely attributed to the escalating demand for personal care products. These products, including lotions, shampoos, deodorants, and makeup, are created to promote or maintain health, hygiene, and aesthetics. The rise in demand for these items is a result of a burgeoning consumer consciousness about the importance of self-care and wellness, leading to greater investment in hygiene and skincare products. Aerosol sprays add value to these products with their hassle-free application, providing an even spread and enhancing user experience with their light and portable structure. For example, it was reported by Cosmetics Europe, a personal care association based in Belgium, that in 2023, 500 million consumers in Europe use personal care products daily to boost their health and maintain well-being. Moreover, the personal care industry adds about USD 31.23 billion (€29 billion) every year to Europe's economy. Consequently, the escalating demand for personal care items is fueling the surge in growth of the aerosol spray market.
