Adding to the celebration of financial education, OneUnited Bank, in partnership with Marvel Comics and Visa, will contribute copies of its Black Panther comic book series, offering students an engaging and culturally resonant way to learn about financial concepts.

The organizations also hope to have San Antonio city officials join the summit to ceremoniously present the stock certificates to the selected students, recognizing them as the city's newest first-time shareholders.

As part of the summit's activities, the IDAC Foundation will host a Charity Golf Tournament on Tuesday, September 23, 2025, at SilverHorn Golf Club in San Antonio, Texas. This event will raise awareness and funds for financial literacy initiatives, further supporting efforts to equip young people with the tools they need to achieve financial success.

Statements from Leadership:

Sam Austin, Founder of IDAC, expressed his enthusiasm:

"I am excited for this year's summit and thrilled for the opportunity to bring important financial resources to the city of San Antonio. This partnership continues to demonstrate the impact we can make when we work together for the benefit of our communities."

Nilza Serrano, Board Chair of the Investment Diversity Advisory Council Foundation, shared her perspective:

"Financial literacy is more than numbers, it's the foundation of opportunity. By making San Antonio's children first-time shareholders, we're not just teaching them about money; we're opening doors to a future where they see themselves as investors, decision-makers, and leaders in their communities. This is how generational change begins."

Prince Dykes, Co-Founder of GCFLF, reflected on recent successes:

"Following the success earlier this year with our Denver financial literacy initiative, where we partnered with City Councilmembers Flor Alvidrez and Darrell Watson to bring financial resources to the city of Denver and create first-time youth shareholders, we are extremely excited to partner with IDAC and bring the same initiative to San Antonio during this year's IDAC Annual Summit."

Chadrick Davis, Co-Founder of GCFLF, emphasized the foundation's vision:

"This is truly an honor, and we're looking forward to our continued partnership with IDAC. We are also eager to bring additional financial programs that we offer to the city of San Antonio in the future."
