has officially relaunched operations at its long-standing location, 103 Commerce Ct in Fairfield, California. The relaunch marks a new chapter for the company as it seeks to reaffirm its role in the community and strengthen its relationship with classic car enthusiasts.

The decision to relaunch follows a comprehensive internal review of business practices. Management has introduced revised processes designed to improve accountability, ensure timely transactions, and provide clear communication with customers and consignors. The company’s Fairfield facility will remain its central hub, reflecting both its historic roots and ongoing commitment to the region.

For more than three decades, Specialty Sales Classics has been recognized as a destination for collectors seeking unique classic cars. With the relaunch, the company aims to continue that tradition while adapting to modern expectations of transparency and reliability.

“This relaunch represents an opportunity to start fresh while honoring the history of Specialty Sales Classics,” said Satinder Singh, CEO of the company. “Our goal is to provide a professional environment where consignors and buyers alike can feel confident that their interests are respected. Fairfield has always been our home, and we are proud to continue serving this community from 103 Commerce Ct.”

The relaunch also underscores the economic and cultural role of the dealership in Fairfield, California. By attracting collectors and enthusiasts from across the country, Specialty Sales Classics contributes to the preservation of automotive heritage while supporting the local business landscape.

As operations resume, Specialty Sales Classics reaffirms its longstanding mission: to connect classic car owners, consignors, and collectors through a trusted and respected dealership model.
