Which Market Player Is Leading the Humanoid Robot Market?

According to our research, Softbank Robotics Corp. led global sales in 2024 with a 1% market share. The company is partially involved in the humanoid robot market, provides humanoid robots such as Pepper and NAO, designed for natural interaction across retail, education, hospitality, and healthcare applications. The company also delivers autonomous service platforms and facility robots while acting as a robot integrator, providing consulting, deployment, and lifecycle support services. Its data-driven solutions and global network strengthen its position in the expanding humanoid robot market.

How Concentrated Is the Humanoid Robot Market?

The market is fragmented, with the top 10 players accounting for 6% of total market revenue in 2024. This level of fragmentation reflects the industry's early-stage development, limited large-scale deployments, and the presence of numerous startups and research-driven companies operating pilot-focused projects. Leading firms such as SoftBank Robotics Corp., UBTECH Robotics Corp. Ltd., Boston Dynamics Inc., Toyota Motor Corporation, and Figure AI Inc. are shaping early commercialization and technical benchmarks. These companies leverage strengths in mobility systems, humanoid motion control, industrial robotics, and large-scale manufacturing capabilities to build competitive positioning. Despite their technological leadership and growing visibility, their combined market share remains modest due to the market's evolving nature and pilot-based revenue streams. As deployments scale, production efficiencies improve, and enterprise adoption expands, consolidation and strategic partnerships are expected to gradually strengthen the position of major players within the humanoid robotics ecosystem.
